The COPD Gene Study cohort consists of over 10,000 individuals who have COPD or are at risk of developing COPD. The objective of the study is to analyze genetic variations to identify the primary genes that determine why some individuals are more susceptible to developing COPD than others. Identifying genetic factors that contribute to this disease will help us understand the biological mechanisms involved, which will ultimately lead to better treatments and improved outcomes for patients. The National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute has funded the second phase of the COPD Gene Study. In this second phase, patients will continue to be followed to determine longitudinal changes in disease development and progression.

The COPD Biomarkers Qualification Consortium's mission is to implement the qualification of public domain biomarkers that assist in the development and registration of treatments for COPD with the FDA. The current members of the Consortium are actively working with several academic centers, the NHLBI and the COPD Foundation to identify and publish key biomarkers.

The Foundation's educational programs are designed to empower those living with COPD to take charge of their health management and to provide health care professionals with tools to improve patient care. The goal of these educational efforts is to improve the quality of life of those affected by COPD. The Big Fat Reference Guide is a comprehensive resource guide developed by the COPD Foundation. The 400+ page Guide was written for people with COPD, their families and caregivers. However, it is also widely used by health care professionals for patient education. The BFRG contains three sections: Managing your health, Managing your disease, and an appendix with useful forms and worksheets. The Slim Skinny Reference Guide is a series of 10 of the most salient topics from the Big Fat Reference Guide.
