The COPD Gene Study cohort consists of over 10,000 individuals who have COPD or are at risk of developing COPD. The objective of the study is to analyze genetic variations to identify the primary genes that determine why some individuals are more susceptible to developing COPD than others. Identifying genetic factors that contribute to this disease will help us understand the biological mechanisms involved, which will ultimately lead to better treatments and improved outcomes for patients. The National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute has funded the second phase of the COPD Gene Study. In this second phase, patients will continue to be followed to determine longitudinal changes in disease development and progression.
